Tsongas endorses Silber

by Chuck Mahaleris

Gubernatorial candidate John Silber was at U.Lowell on Tuesday where he picked up the political endorsement of former United States Senator Paul Tsongas.

The former U.Lowell Board of Trustees chairman said to reporters and supporters in Cumnock Hall, Tsongas said that he made his decision to support Silber after seeing television ads that depicted gubernatorial candidate William Weld as being sympathetic to the state's college students. Tsongas said that Weld could not be truly sympathetic when he supports Question 3 which according to the former senator would take $126 million away from higher education.

"There is clearly a superior candidate. That candidate is John Silber," he said.

Silber also used the opportunity to blast Weld and hype his own stance on higher education. "Our educational system was once the envy of the world and it must be again."

Silber called for the elimination of waste in state offices especially where departments duplicate the efforts of other departments. "There is a magnificent waste. There is an abundance of waste. I want to see a massive reduction in administration." Later he added that these reductions should not be "mindless across the board cuts" which he termed as hurting those services and agencies, including higher education, that are truly needy.

"This state is dying of lawyer/bureaucrats," Silber said describing his opponent. Silber said that Weld was "flip-flopping" on Question 3 on the November 6 statewide ballot.

Question 3, which is sponsored by the Citizens for Limited Taxation, if approved would incrementally roll back the personal income tax of 5.7% on earned income to 4.25% for 1991; then up to 4.625% for 1992; and back to its 1988 rate of 5% from there on. The initiative will also roll back all fees to what they were on June 30, 1988 and roll back all taxes other than the personal income tax to their levels as of August 2, 1989.

Silber is strongly opposed to this initiative and said that Weld is beginning to realize that its

Voter Registration a sizable success

by Keith Neal

Last week the University of Lowell held a very successful voter registration drive. 1400 people were registered to vote, with 1280 of these in the city of Lowell. The drive was organized by Keith Neal, SGA Senator; Bob White, Bourgeois Hall president; and Don Cox, a resident advisor. The organizers recruited a core group of 26 helpers from the ranks of SGA, R.A. Staff, and MASSPIRG who went down to city hall and were sworn in as deputies with the power to register people to vote. They then publicized and planned the drive for Tuesday, October 2nd

On both days there was a table set up on the North SIC and South SUB, where deputies were registering people from 10am to 4pm. These tables were staffed by SGA and MASSPIRG members. The tables were very successful, and accounted for 500 registered voters. In the evenings R.A. Staff and R.H.A. members set up tables in each residence hall. There were at least three deputies from each building, and this too was very successful, accounting for 900 registered voters. All the residence halls contributed, but by far Bourgeois and Leach got the best turnout, due to the high publicity and hard work of the R.A. Staff and R.H.A. members from these buildings.

The emphasis on the drive was not just to register people to vote, but to get them to register in Lowell. As John O'Donnell (one of the deputies) said to try to get this point across to people "One vote in your hometown won't do much for the University but 1,000 votes in one district in Lowell is a substantial block of voters that the politicians can't ignore." And already politicians are starting to take notice. Last Monday Mary

Burns (candidate for state representative in this district) appeared on campus at the rally and addressed the students saying she'd be there for ULowell. Also last week Susan Rourke, the current incumbent, was on campus trying to regain favor with the students. This sudden attention from the candidates is because we now have a huge block of voters, and both candidates know ULowell could swing the election. There is even a debate tentatively scheduled for Monday October 29th in Cumnock Hall between the two candidates. The fact that these candidates are now appearing on campus and addressing ULowell proves how successful the voter registration drive was. Hopefully, the results of the election will mean better representation for ULowell.

One thing is for certain; ULowell will no longer be ignored in the political arena.

O'Donnell honored

University Police Sergeant Stephen O'Donnell was recently honored during graduation ceremonies held at the Massachusetts Criminal Justice Training Council's Metro Boston Complex in Needham, Massachusetts as Commandant of Campus Police Recruit Class 90-1. Sergeant O'Donnell received an engraved plaque in recognition of the strong leadership qualities he demonstrated during the seven week training assignment on behalf of the Massachusetts Association of College and University Police Safety Directors. The Basic Recruit Academy, for newly hired College and University Police Officers, covered a wide variety of instruction in police related topics, along with both an entrance and exit physical agility requirement. Sergeant O'Donnell was assisted by Lieutenant Richard Lee of the Emerson College Police Department. The class included recruits from the Boston University Medical Police, Bentley College, Brandeis University, Emerson College, Emmanuel College, Framingham State College, and Suffolk University.

Sergeant O'Donnell joined the University of Lowell Police Department in May of 1988, and was selected under the Department's new entrance level hiring and screening process, and was promoted to his present rank on October 1, 1990. Before coming to ULowell, he spent ten years on the Somerville Police Department where he received a department commendation for bravery and performance above and beyond the call for duty.

Sergeant O'Donnell is expected to receive his undergraduate degree in Criminal Justice during 1991 Commencement Ceremonies here at the University of Lowell. He resides in Dracut, Massachusetts with his wife, Kathleen and their two sons.

Student Government election results

by Ellen Barre

Last Wednesday, October 2nd, the Student Government the only positions were those of Association held its Fall elections, to fill the freshman offices and unfilled positons left over from the spring elections. Students voted on the campus pf their major at the McGauvran Student Center on South and the Commuter Lounge on North. Approximately 350 students voted.

Class of 94

Jennifer Dion-Nicopoulos won against her opponent Susan Strong for the position of President. Nichole Addario and Christopher Theo vied for the position of Vice-President, and Nichole won the position. Angel Cruzado ran unopposed for Treasurer.

Out of seven senate positions only four were filled. Scott Baetz, Stephan Anstey, Beth Drummond and Matthew Drouin are the new senators for the Class of 1994.

In the Class of 93 elections Secretary, Treasurer and three student senators. Bridget Dou glas and Cindy Albanese ran unopposed to the positions of Secretary and Treasurer respectively. The three senator positions were filled by Jason Butze, Gregory Anderson, and Charles Coffi.

Class of 92

In the Class of 92 elections the race for Treasurer was between William Lovely and Angela Delmonte. William Lovely won. David Grinblatas filled one of the five positions open on the Student Senate.

Class of 91

The Class of 1991 needed to fill only one position in the Student Senate, for which three people ran. Richard Conrad was victorious over Jon R. Latorella and Craig Millman.

This year's homecoming king chosen from nine people running was Pete McCarron. The homecoming queen also chosen from a choice of nine was Debi Fredette.

The homecoming court consisted of the 2nd, 3rd and 4th place winners. The queen's court was to be Karen Shea, Tanya Arruda and Lauren Canova. Tanya Arruda declined the position so it was offered to the next runner up Caryn Budd. She also declined so Daphnee McGuffre filled the open spot. The king's court positions were to be held by Henry Lewis, TImothy P. LLoyd and Patrick Borzi. Henry Lewis declined and was replaced by Sean

Hunger-Homeless Week

by Phil Morris & Jason Butze

There are approximately 3 million people homeless in this country. Out of a population of 105,000 Lowell residents, 19,000 live at or below the poverty level. Many of these people live only a paycheck or two away from losing their homes. Families with children are the most quickly growing sector of the homeless population. In Lowell, families make up more than half of the homeless population.

In an effort to make students more aware of the problem. President Hogan has declared November 11-18, 1990 to be Hunger-Homeless Week on campus in coordination with a city wide effort initiated by the Lowell city government. He asks that members of the university community become involved with the fight to stop homelessness.

In Lowell there are two pantries and four shelters. The two pantries, Food Pantry of Merrimack Valley and the Open Pantry of Greater Lowell, provide basic food provisions monthly to over 3000 of the hungry in greater Lowell. Middlesex Shelter, Pawtucket House, Alternative House and the House of Hope serve nearly 1500 people annually.

The Middlesex Shelter serves a "broad range, mostly men, ranging from hard-core street people and drug abusers to those who've suddenly slipped through the cracks.' This shelter provides case management, medical services, nondenominational religious services, food and clothing, and furniture. It serves approximately 500 people a year.

The Pawtucket House houses twenty people in individual apartments. The House provides temporary emergency shelter, three meals/day, housing searches, and a one-year follow up among its programs.

Alternative House is an emergency shelter for battered women and their families. The Alternative House provides support groups, a 24-hour crisis line, parenting groups, and legal, welfare and housing assistance.

The House of Hope has room for forty women and their children,. While there, "some women work, some receive welfare and some attend school." The House of Hope provides advocacy, housing, parenting, family life group, budgeting, visiting nurse and a children's library.

Dr. Mark Levine, coordinator of the Office of Community Service, has assembled a campus-city advisory committee to oversee campus activities that relate to the Hunger-Homeless Week. One of the planned events is a teach-in on Hunger and Homelessness: the problem, the policy, the value. The teach-in is planned to happen both at the university and in city schools with special speakers and presentations dealing with the everyday reality of shelters, street survival as well as housing programs and policies which pertain to the homeless.

The University of Lowell is being asked to actively participate with the Greater Lowell organizations, government, clergy, public schools, shelters and the food pantry in the events of Hunger-Homeless Awareness Week. University students, faculty and staff are being asked to take part in a "hands between the shelters" program on Wednesday, November 14, from

Other planned events include a can drive, and consciousness-raising about the homeless problem. People will also be encouraged to donate a meal or money to a special fund for the homeless. The hope is that through the events of the planned Hunger-Homeless Week, people will become involved with this serious problem - which exists not only in Lowell, but throughout the nation. For additional information on the planned events or how to become involved with the homeless problem, contact Dr Mark Levine, Coordinator of Community Service at ext.

passage would be aestructive to the state and would try to forestall its implementation for several months afterwards. "Mr. Weld wants to have it both ways. He wants to flip-flop. We need a straight forward vote no on Question 3," Silber said.

Silber, who later visited the school's plastic engineering department, said that industry and higher education in the state would be the keys to turning the state's economy around. "We don't have to go through a long depression to turn the state around," he said. "This is a crisis that affords us an opportunity.

He said that he would create an Agency for Trade and Industry that would be responsible for attracting new industry to the state and targeting new ways for Massachusetts to compete with the Pacific Rim countries. He said that within 15 years the state could again compete with these economic world leaders. "We can anticipate wave upon wave of new industry."

Silber also called for the doubling of student tuitions at the state's universities, but said that the schools would retain 100% of the additional revenues.

Student Trustee Patrick Demers was on hand for Tsongas' endorsement and said, "I think if Silber is elected he will be a benefit to the university as a whole." But Demers was unsure if his tuition-increase policy was a good idea.

Another thing that I found was rather funny on the part of the government was that all foreign businesses had to be 50% Kuwaiti owned. There was no two ways about it. This was done to strengthen the economy of the country; it also relieved many Kuwaiti nationals of the need to work. Many did, but half the profits from the companies went to them. GP: Nice set-up!

PK: Yeah! And this was true for every foreign company in Kuwait. Suppose Texaco came in and wanted to set up shop. A Kuwaiti would own half the enterprise in Kuwait. The guy would become a millionaire in a matter of days.

A lot of this cracking down was due to the gentleman from the country next door, the Ayatollah Khomeini. At this time, he was calling for a religious revival throughout the Arab world, a rejuvenation of the Muslim faith in its purest form, in a stronger, more fundamental

Kuwait: an insider's view

Peter Kollias is a student at the University of Lowell and is currently interested in studying political science. He spent 14 years in Kuwait where he went to the American school of Kuwait until his junior year.

Geoffrey M. Pahl is an English major and the senior News Editor for the Connec-

GP: When did you live in Kuwait and how old were you at the time?

PK: I lived in Kuwait from 1975 to June 1989, since I was 3 years old until I was 17 and a junior in the American School of Kuwait.

GP: Did you like it there?

PK: Did I like it? Sure, the life was good. Many of my friends' fathers worked as technicians and engineers for both the government and the oil companies. They were provided with subsidized housing and a company car. The companies also paid for water and electricity. The company even paid for tuition to the private American School of Kuwait - approximately 3000 dollars a year. In many cases the company paid for the family's trip back home over the summer and the summer vacation - which was anywhere from three weeks to three months.

GP: So there were lots of perks?

PK: Oh yeah, there were a lot of advantages. For example, because my father worked for the university as a physics professor, we got to travel all summer long for free, to wherever my parents were from. My father is Greek and my mother is French; we're U.S. citizens and they paid for the trips to each of those countries; the trip home and back every summer. My father had three months vacation and he was a university professor; that makes no sense; you don't see that anywhere else, as far as I know. He now works at Mass General Hospital and he'll be lucky if he gets two weeks vacation! The pay isn't significantly different. He worked there for fourteen years and I think he got promoted once during the whole time, and one of the reasons that he left was that he was turned down for a promotion, one which he really deserved. It was all because one of the influential people in the department didn't like him. But, as I said, the pay was no different, just the benefits were. Medicine was free as were a lot of other

GP: How long ago did you leave Kuwait?

PK: It's been about a year and three months altogether.

GP: Do you feel you were lucky to leave Kuwait when you did?

PK: Yeah, yeah.

GP: Were people ever worried about Iraq?

PK: I was always interested to know what was going on at the time. Iraq fought Iran for, what was it, eight or ten years? Where we lived, we heard it going a lot of the time and once we were even to the point where we were about to leave because Iran decided to launch a Silkworm missile at us - "us" being Kuwait - and that missile landed about a mile from our house. Those things carry about 1000 pounds of explosives. I think you can imagine the effect.

The reason for the hostilities toward Kuwait was because Kuwait was supporting Iraq like hell, I mean they gave them money, military supplies, anything you can think of they gave it. What Kuwait was doing was brown nosing, so to speak, toward Iraq. Kuwait did this with good reason. They were afraid of what would happen exactly what has happened. To protect themselves from Iran, the Kuwaiti military put barges in the water that provided targets for the Silkworms. Well, the missile they shot at us hit a barge. I have a feeling that's why I'm still alive.

GP: Now, who were they shooting at, or what were they aiming PK: Well, I think it was random, at least the one that came near us was a shot in the dark, but they did shoot one at Kuwait's main off-shore oil loading platform, and that one did extensive damage. We never found out all that much about it because the news was often heavily censored.

GP: Was there much censorship in Kuwait?

PK: Yes, always.

GP: By who? The government?

PK: Probably. Suppose there had been a machine gun attack on the Emir's palace. If the government didn't want to have it mentioned in the paper then it wasn't. Period. But if George Bush goes out to Kennebunkport to do some fishing, the whole country knows about it. The Emir is secluded. He has the security pumped up like crazy. Put it this way: I've never seen the guy in person; in a country that's 200 miles long by 100 miles wide, it's ridicu-

Censorship was rampant. On TV, even kisses were cut from scenes, whether it was because of the Kuwaiti religious beliefs or not, I don't really know, but it was getting ridiculous. I'm serious; even cartoons fictional characters were edited this way.

GP: So one wouldn't find Debbie Does Dallas-type videos Hoating around Kuwait!

PK: No, no! (laugh)

GP: What kind of lifestyles do the women in Kuwait have?

PK: There was a whole range of lifestyles, depending mainly on how orthodox or liberal the Kuwaiti family in question is. The Kuwaitis were Muslim, as were most of the Arabs that resided in Kuwait. I don't think that there were any Christian Kuwaitis; no one came around to try an convert them, not that they would have converted anyway. Within the Kuwaiti families there was a broad spectrum of observances, from extreme liberalism, to extreme funda-Some Kuwaiti women dressed about as freely and went to work as American women. Don't get me wrong, though; there were no women running around in miniskirts. On the other end of the spectrum there were the women who stayed home most of the day, and seldom came in contact with any men except for male members of the family. They dressed in veils that covered them from head to toe and wore gloves- the whole works. In the middle of this spectrum were women who didn't wear veils; they dressed with the longer dresses and the long sleeved

During the last few years that I lived in Kuwait, I found that liberalism was retreating in a sense. I don't mean to say it should have been going forwards, but backwards wasn't right either. When I say "Liberalism", I mean the open adoption of "Western" values and conventions.

For example, Islam prohibits the consumption of alcoholic beverages. Kuwaiti law reflects this. Now, it used to be that whenever our family came back from the summer vacation we could bring in two bottles of liquor. Towards the end of our stay we didn't even bother trying. You were (unofficially) allowed to bring in two bottles of liquor. My father was a type of person that would always answer yes to the question if we had any liquor in any of our luggage - to avoid any unnecessary risks. Usually, if we were honest the guy would let us through, otherwise they would be confiscated and they could cause us a considerable amount of trouble. Sometimes it was just a stroke of luck that we got a nice customs official.

Also, we saw liberalism diminishing in the case of parliament. The Emir decided a couple years back that the parliament was an unnecessary waste of time, so he simply dissolved it. So basically what we had was a monarchy, along with the usual accompaniment of ministers for this and that. Things are supposed to progress, not regress.

Arts & Entertainment

Jesus Christ Superstar

by Rita M. Rouvalis

I had some pretty interesting offers for these tickets, but being a selfish-type A & E Editor, I kept them for myself. And I'm glad I did. I last saw this play nearly 15 years ago as young child. And a cloudy, vague memory of something wonderful has now chrystalized into an incredible experience.

Since it was produced orginally in the early seventies, I thought the musical might sound a little dated, but it didn't (except maybe "What's the Buzz"). Unfortunately, the only aspect of the play that is dated is its assumption that its audience has a basic familiarity with the gospels. And in our increasingly secular society, that just can't be assumed of the younger generation.

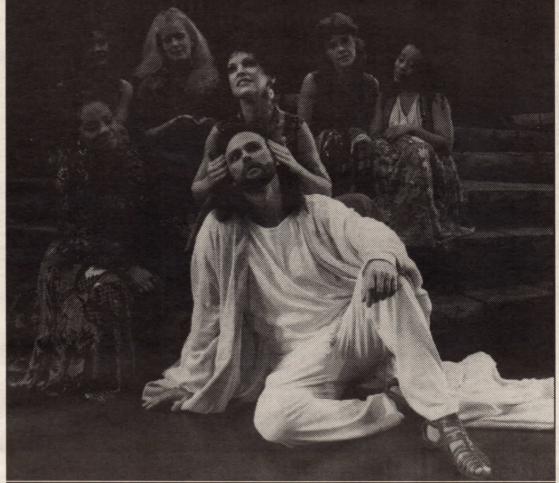

The action of the first half of the play is uninteresting. Flying through the major miracles (turning the water to wine at the wedding at Cana; various healings; and the clearing of the temple), Jesus doesn't do much but hang around and be morose. Someone who never learned about these events would have been totally lost. Michael Juda, the original Judas Iscariout in the Broadway production was riveting. Tortured and haunted by demons, he upstages Stephen Lehew as Jesus completely.

Lehew came through in the second act, however, with a Garden of Gethsemane so powerful it blew the audience away. And he continued to blow away the audience through the trial with Pontius Pilate and, finally, the crucifixion.

The highlights of the show are numerous -- the tear-jerking "I Don't Know How to Love Him;" Judas' after-death rendition of "Jesus Christ Superstar." But the very last scene was the show-stopper. The choreography was exquisite. As Jesus hangs in mid-air, the cross is lifted away and a backdrop of tiny white lights comes down behind him. Meanwhile, the orchestra plays a gorgeous instrumental.

The musical has some dynamite moments, there's no question about that. And I thoroughly enjoyed seeing it after so many years. But it belongs to another generation -- a generation that was concerned with spirtual matters.

Above, the cast of the 20th anniversary production of Andrew Lloyd Webber's Jesus Christ Superstar. But you missed it. It's gone forever. You can, however, catch Sarafina!, an awardwinning play about the fight against apartheid in S. Africa. It opens at the Colonial Theatre on

by Stan Shura and Dan Miot

For those of you who missed "Comedy Night at Cumnock Hall" Monday night of last week, we hope you have a heck of an excuse. You missed a sensational bit of entertainment. Expectations were high from the beginning and with featured comics Jim Dunn, Eddie Brill, and Kevin Knox, they were fulfilled stylishly. Said sophomore Rosalind Rooney of Fox Hall "It was awesome. There was a lot of talent and the price was great." With a modest fee of one dollar and proper student I.D., an enthusiastic crowd of about 200 gathered to enjoy an evening of side-splitting hilari-

Host Stevie C. got the event underway with a pretty decent ten-minute opener in which he discussed bar-going women and their numerous drunken excursions to the lavatory. He eventually shifted to commercials and reached a climax when he mentioned that John Travolta as Vinnie Barbarino should advertise Miracle Ear. He concluded with a snappy delivery of the supposition that Dolly Parton should do commercials for uh-huh, you guessed it - milk.

Jim Dunn was the first comedian of the night. His stage presence and ease of manner immediately won the audience over. He poked fun at anything from the ritual of a tennis game to commercials to The People's Court and The Case of the Bathtub Boogie; and Doug Llewelyn whom Dunn said has a hairpiece that makes him look like Star Wars' Chewbacca. Even the beloved star of The Price is Right fell prey to his wit. Nothing was sacred. He mentioned the New England Patriots and presented a scenario involving the aging Steve Grogan. An already rippling audience absolutely fell to the floor when he mocked the renowned quarterback and quipped, "I've been sacked, and I can't get up."

Mr. Dunn was indeed a tough act to follow, but Eddie Brill, who has appeared on Star Search and Caroline's Comedy Hour, capably met the challenge. He relentlessly poked fun at people's accents, including his own Brookline dialect. He picked on the English language in general, and its overly abundant abnormalities. I before e except after c, except for seizure, leisure, and so on; a, e, i, o, u, and sometimes y - hewent on and on. He particularly enjoyed cutting down our idioms and pondered how a foreigner could possible determine the meaning of "You drive me up the wall" by the definition sh—." Incidentally, if nonchadoes chalant mean?

Knox. He is a graduate of ULowell and has appeared at Clay. These guys are hot! Nick's Comedy Stop. His straightforward humor left us in stitches. Although his act was heavily laden with profanity, he generally stayed within character and delivered a fine routine. His humor was largely based on his own experiences as a man over thirty, and he was often the butt of the joke. He admitted, for instance, that he now has a "spare tire" and that many of his friends are members of the Hair club for Men. He received quite a few chuckles as he described a scene where four very drunken men attempted to decide who would drive home. His humor reached gut-wrenching proportions when he stated matter-offactly that he can't even chew the brand of gum that squirts in your mouth. The tears never flowed so hard for so long. The vast majority of his act was, obviously, inappropriate for more specificity in the Connec-

Free Concert! Tiger's Baku, a five-piece fusion band, will be performing free at Durgin Hall on October 13 at 8pm thanx to the Center for the Performing Arts.

Pilobolus is coming

The University of Lowell Center for the Arts will present Pilobolus on Saturday, October 20 at 8pm. The performance will take place in durgin Hall on the University's South Campus. Tickets are priced at $17, $15, and $13 and can be ordered with Mastercard/Visa by calling (508)934-4444.

Zany, outrageous, funny, and inventive Pilobolus has been displaying its wide range of choreographic and theatrical ingenuity for almost two decades. Taking its name from a genus of photopropic fungi, this six-person troupe was founded in 1971 by Moses Pendleton and Jonathan Wolken as an outgrowth of dance classes taken at Dartmouth College.

Pilobolus' repertory still includes some of its earliest offerings, created when the dancers performed and managed their own company, hung their own lights and, on occasion, composed their own music. From the troupe's first years, its dances have been characterized by the sculptural use of the body, often on neverbefore-attempted multiple formations. Witty and irreverent, these playful permutations on human form and movement have become the company's trademark.

Based in Washington, Connecticut, these dancing iconoclasts have toured worldwide. The troupe's first appearance abroad, at the Edinburgh Festival in 1973, brought them the Scotsman's award for Best Fringe Event. the received the Berlin Critics' Prize in 1975, and in 1978 the U.S. State Department sponsored a Pilobolus tour that included India, Afghanistan, and Sri Lanka. The company has played to full houses from London's Sadlers Wells Theatre and Rome's Teatro Olimpico to New York's Joyce Theater.

Pilobolus has been the recipient of many commissions from the American Dance Festival and its works are represented in the repertoires of major dance companies around the U.S. including the Joffrey, Feld, Ohio and Hartford Ballet companies. A veteran of two seasons on Broadway, the company has also appeared on television — in a variety of guises. They have been the subject of programs in PBS's "Dance in American" and "Great Performances" series, have performed in TV commercials, and on the Tonight Show and Sesame Here's a way to make easy money. Buy a huge old house, renovate it, then rent it out to tenants. You could probably make a good profit off the rent and life would be easy.

This is exactly what Drake "Goodman" and Patty Palmer (Matthew Modine and Melanie Griffith) did, and their dreams almost came true until a clever sociopath named Carter Hayes (Michael Keaton) came to rent. He seemed like the model tenant, but ended up to be the dangerous opposite. When Patty and Drake try to evict him, Carter resists, and all hell breaks loose. And the law is on Carter's side! What the defenseless couple doesn't know is that Carter is experienced at this sort of thing. And so, war breaks out between tenant and landlords with the tenant cleverly manipulating the landlords' minds. Even worse, if Carter wins this war, he could destroy the couple's relationship, their home and maybe even their lives.

So try and catch this latest thriller directed by Academy award winner John Schlesinger. He takes a perfect idea and turns it into your worst nightmare. He'll bring to you a feeling of desperate helplessness as you watch an innocent couple's happy life fall apart. Don't let it get you too angry though, because it's only a movie even though it is possible (think of what college students do to their apartments).

Escape with Nightscapes

by Sandi Gillis

In the last issue of the Connector, I presented an article introducing you to New Age music. I told you that it was the newest way to relax, and that by having no words in it, the music let your mind wander. It was almost as it you were dreaming as you listened. It's the kind of music that reaches the heart of all people.

I know most won't run to the nearest record store to sample this unique kind of music, because they're really not sure of it. So let me introduce you to NIGHTSCAPES. What is Nightscapes? It's a radio show on WJIB FM 97 hosted by Anne Williams. Anne plays for listeners(many of which are college students) all styles of New Age. She's actually the one who's responsible for making New Age music a success in the Boston Area. If you tune into FM 97 any night from 7PM-12AM you're sure to get an idea of what New Age music is. Anne will tell you in her smooth tranquil voice where to find the music you hear and who's responsible for it. She'll inform you of concerts in the area as well as new releases, but most importantly she'll make it possible for you to escape into another world by simply tuning your radio to FM

This is not your typical radio show. It's one Anne bases on what listeners want to hear, not on what the executive's want her to play, and this is how she became a success. You'll feel as if Anne is talking to you personally when she speaks of each song, because she's so down to earth and unafraid to reveal her own emotions. She makes you laugh, but she also makes you think as she shares many stories that listeners tell her. You can even call Anne any time during her show and you're sure to get through. You can ask her anything you like about the music or just chat a little about the pleasures the New Age music brings.

Recently I visited WJIB in Boston and was warmly welcomed. I felt like I was visiting a close friend due to the way Anne spoke to me and made me feel at home. She gave me all kinds of information on New Age as well as some samples of music. She was willing to take out time to talk with me about whatever I needed to know.

Since the visit I decided that I would try and share with readers each week some of the interesting stuff I found out. So look for the New Age article occasionally and you'll find out all kinds of things you never knew about the"fastest expanding genre of music to hit the music industry since Rock and Roll."

In the mean time, tune in your radio to FM 97, lay down and relax and find out why so many other college campuses are tuning into New Age music on NIGHTSCAPES.

Bourgeois/Concordia "Thing" a Success!

On Thursday, Septemthe first Bourgeois/Concordia "thing' was held on the front lawn of Bourgeois Hall. The "Thing" consisted of a cookout/bbq at 5:00 followed by a volleyball game and music provided by South Hall's resident-D.J., Greg Compagnone. The "Thing' gave residents (almost 300) a chance to mingle and get to know each other a little better. At 7:00 Mary Burns, a University of Lowell Alumni and candidate for State Representative of Lowell, spoke to the crowd and rallied support for her campaign and encouraged voter registration. The evening was an overall success!

Many thanks go to the staffs of both Concordia and Bourgeois Hall, without whom the set-up, cooking and cleaning would not have happened. Additionally, thanks to ARA services for providing food for the program.

Finally, congratulations to R.A.s Tracey Falardeau, Jim Rego, Suzanne Sherwood and Peter McCarron for coordinating this building to building event.

About Alcohol

October has been designated "Chemical Health" month by the Social Issues Committee at the University of Lowell. Alcohol plays a role in many of our lives and falls under a broad spectrum of "chemicals" which also include: illegal drugs, nicotine, caffeine, over the counter medications and prescription pharmaceuticals. One goal of the Social Issues Committee is to educate the University Life, 12% of the total resident is of legal drinking age (as of Opening Day 1990). However, alcohol is a factor in 76% of all officially documented disciplinary incidents.

Alcohol has pervaded the residence halls. It may be found at most "social gatherings" where many who attend are under the age of twenty one. This has caused the number of alcohol related incidents to remain high. In response to these alcohol related problems, two groups have emerged. S.E.P. (Substance Abuse Education Program) was designed to council the alcohol troubled student one-on-one by a Residence Life Staff member specifically trained for this purpose. The second group is an alcohol education program provided by the Counseling Center located on South Campus. Each program will be utilized this year by the Residence Life Staff for outreach, counseling and education for residents.

There are several signs to look for when identifying an alcohol troubled person. Identifying alcohol as a problem or potential problem is the first all important step to seeking help. The signs are: blackouts, changes in drinking behavior, avoidance (of discussing his/her habits) chronic hangovers, a drinking habit that effects the persons work or study habits and behavioral changes.

The Social Issues Committee urges you to educate yourselves as to the debilitating effects alcohol has on its chronic users. During Alcohol Awareness Week (October 22-26) we will be sponsoring a monitored drinking demonstration on both north and south campus. Stop by and observe this (never before attempted) demonstration of how alcohol effects it's users in various amounts and intervals.

Ready for a night out!

We have a night planned for you. On October 16, 1990, a trip to the Hard Rock Cafe is planned. If you would like to go, contact Monique at ext. 5164 or Kristin at ext. 5227. There will be a two dollar charge for reserving a seat. Space is limited, the first forty-five people will be able to attend. Come out for a night of pure fun. Editorials

Total separation

Patricia Janice

Editor-in-Chief

I was surprised to see such an overwhelming response to the editorial I wrote last week. Thank you, Dean Taylor, for clarifying the issue in your letter to the editor "Honest question - honest answer;" and also to Joe Iadonisi for presenting yet another view in "Don't knock the Gideons." However, I still stand by what I said last

Mr. Iadonisi pointed out that he did not feel "obligated" to take a bible. Well, I'm glad that he did not feel pressured, but that does not negate my own personal feelings and those of other people who did feel a bit intimidated. His position in the Campus Ambassadors and the fact that he does "already have several" bibles could have made it easier for him to politely decline, as opposed to a person who may not have been as interested. He also pointed out that the Gideons provide bibles to hospitals, motels, hotels, prisons and other institutions around the globe. That is a noble thing to do, and I am definitely not "knocking" the Gideons in any way.

Mr. Iadonisi also informed me that there are several religious clubs that receive funding and club rooms from the SGA, yet the bulk of their funding comes from outside sources. This is an issue that I strongly oppose. I do not think that a public university should provide funding for any type of religious organization, whether it is a "club" or not. Religious clubs should have the financial support of their respective benefactors, but not the money that all students (of varied religions) must pay for their activities fee.

I don't think that is too much to ask. If we all were attending a private religious university, then why not fund the religious clubs, but ULowell is not a private institution; therefore, there must be a total separation between the church and the state. ULowell should definitely encourage religious activities, but it is not ULowell's responsibility to be providing funds for them.

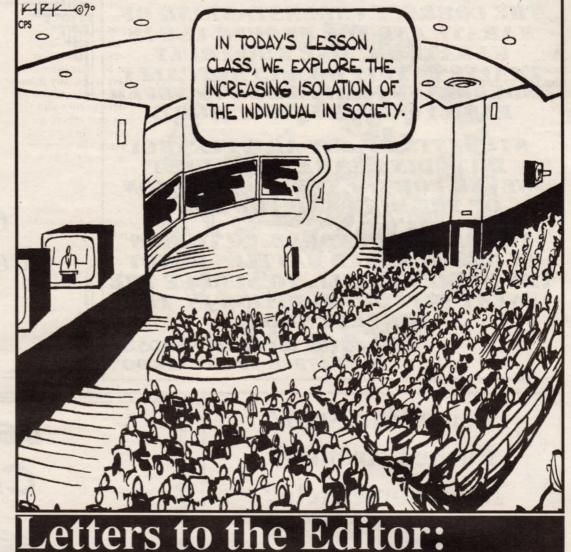

Due to the amount of 'letters to the editor' I have received (and the amount of space I have to work with) I could not publish all of them. Any letters that did not appear this week will be in next week's issue. Send editorial responses to The Connector, Fox 426.

Don't knock the Gideons

This letter is in response to Patricia Janice's editorial about the bible solicitors that were on South Campus last week. I, too, am not particularly fond of street solicitors of any type, but when the gentlemen offered me a bible, I politely declined, which is what you should have done. It's not that I didn't want a bible, the fact is I already have several. Nor did I feel obligated to take one, and don't assume that everyone who took one did so out of obligation.

I can't understand why you were so shocked that the Office of University Life was sponsoring this event. In fact, the OUL did not 'sponsor' in the sense of 'pay for' the bible solicitors to be on campus, they simply allowed it. Are we to disallow someone from exercising their constitutional right of free speech just because someone might feel a little intimidated? This type of tolerance is by no means a violation church/state separation. As for the organization these men represent, the Gideons International is an internationally recognized and respected organization of thousands of dedicated men and women who provide, free of charge, bibles to hospitals, motels, hotels, prisons, and other institutions around the globe. And in many parts of the world, a bible is a rare and treasured commodity.

In answer to your question, "why does ULowell sponsor (one religious group) and not another?"; it's not as if other religious groups are knocking down the doors of the OUL to sponsor an event. And if some other religious or civic group would propose to provide a worthwhile service to students,

Honest question - honest answer

Patricia Janice has asked a very legitimate question in her editorial "You want a Bible, Right?" (Oct. 4, 1990) and, as requested, I am happy to attempt to clarify the issue

First of all, the Office of University Life, myself in particular, is responsible to oversee religious programming on campus. We have attempted to implement the guidelines stated in religious programs section of the Council for the Advancement of Standards for Student Services/Development (April 1986). Our mission is summed up in the following statement:

"Public institutions must offer or provide access to programs that enable interested students to pursue full spiritual growth and development, and foster a campus atmosphere in which interested members of the college community may freely express their religion and faith."

Our intention is to allow students access to a broad spectrum of religious beliefs and experiences. We are required to provide "reasonable opportunities" for students at the University of Lowell to: question, explore, understand, affiliate with, avoid, and express or reject religious faiths; see individual counseling and/or group associations for the examination and application of spiritual values and beliefs to life and their own spiritual development; worship communally; and pray and meditate.

Only one request so far this year has been received from "outside" the University-that of the "Gideons". In many ways they are an ideal group because their sole purpose is to offer literature (new testament Bibles). They do not solicit for funds, they do not solicit for members, mailing lists, or anything else. While on campus, they are required to abide by the same restrictions any other club or organization would when occupying space on campus. Any religious group whose purpose was consistent with the standards previously stated, especially respecting the right of a student to say no, is welcome to have the same opportunity.

This relates to the "sponsorship" issue, in that, because all outside religious groups must go through the Office of University Life, our office is listed as "sponsor" for space reservation purposes only. This is also true in the case of blood drives run by the American Red Cross.

No employee of the University can legally or ethically engage in the work of religious ministry as part of his or her official duties. To do so would mean violating the constitutional separation between church and state. However, we can (and do) allow for those who are religious workers of any faith to function on campus. Specific guidelines exist for such workers to become Chaplains. Also, there are club guidelines set by the Student Government Association which apply equally to religious and non-religious clubs. These are the parameters in which we operate.

I do accept full responsibility for the specific location the Gideons used on South Campus. The Director of Student Activities, Mary Connelly, voiced concern that morning that the location I had described to the Gideons was not usually available. That will be changed for next year. However, I know of no reason to restrict this group access to campus. As a footnote, they reported that 1,300 booklets were picked up by students on that day.

Hopefully, this answers the questions you've appropriately raised. If I can be of any further assistance, please stop by the Office of University Life or give me a call (X2100).

Homophobia and morality: what do you think??

My American Heritage Dictionary is now 20 years old and, as I suspected, it does not contain the word "homophobic". I'm not quite sure when this word came into common usage but I am sure that it describes a reality that has existed, albeit unnamed, for a very long time. Phobias are fears and the "homo" root refers to homosexuality. Thus "homophobia", as it has come to be used today, has to do with the fears that some people have of homosexuals.

Morality, on the other hand, is a very old concept and it has to do with principles or ideas about right conduct. "Thou shalt not steal", for instance, is a moral principle and it tells us that stealing is wrong.

So why talk about homophobia and morality at the same time? Because sometimes the rush to identify and discourage homophobia implicitly suggests that all the moral issues associated with homosexuality are no longer in dispute. For example, even though homophobia, as a fear, is not right or wrong, it can lead to unjust actions like depriving someone of a job or preventing someone from renting an apartment. Thus, it is important to address homophobia because it can lead to immoral activity. At the same time, however, homosexuality needs to be recognized as a complex psyco-social reality that has a host of moral overtones that cannot be ignored. With this in mind, therefore, a clear distinction needs to be made between the two so that a condemnation of homophobia is not, at the same time, taken to imply or necessitate a blanket acceptance of homosexuality.

What is at issue here is a sensitivity to the diverse make-up of the community in which we live and a need, that we all share, to grow together in our understanding of complex issues like our sexuality. In our pluralistic society, we discover that people can have beliefs, opinions and values different from our own and still be good people, worthy of our friendship and esteem. We also realize that friendship and mutual esteem enable our collaborative search for truth.

Applied to our issues of homophobia and homosexuality, this means that it is very important to clearly distinguish the two. While we might all agree that homophobia is a fear that we all ought to overcome, we might not agree about our understanding of homosexuality with all of its anthropological, psychological and moral implications. In other words, we can agree about homophobia and still disagree about homosexuality without being either intellectually dishonest or uncritically naive.

A practical way of making this distinction work can be drawn from the way we come to know, understand and describe ourselves. Many years ago a friend of mine who lost his leg in an automobile accident reminded me that he was not an amputee but rather a person with a handicap. And, by the way, he pointed out, I was a person with handicaps as well. I was just less aware of my handicaps than I was of his. The point that he made and that we all need to make is that we are persons first and foremost. How we choose to describe ourselves after this fundamental observation gets us into a wide range of qualities, characteristics and attributes. To settle for one adjective regardless of what it might be to describe ourselves or others is not only incorrect but so limiting as to distort our self-understanding and the understanding that others are to have of us as well. In our present discussion, words like homosexual and lesbian would seem to fit this bill.

In the Christian, Catholic tradition great attention is given to the Two Great Commandments of Jesus: to Love God and to love one's neighbor. Christian morality is subsequently built on these pedestals and represents the collective wisdom of centuries of faith-filled people searching to do what is right. In all probability, Jesus met people who were homosexual in his day. There is no doubt that he treated them as he treated everyone else that he met: with compassion, love and tender care. Whether we are Christian, Jew, Moslem or Hindu, we cannot find any better standards for dealing with one another than the standards espoused by him. Similarly, he managed to deal with the complexities of the human condition by encouraging people to move beyond where they were in their search for the right thing to do. And this is precisely what we need to do as well as we continue to struggle in a world that has never been more hungry or more needy for truth, wisdom and principles of right conduct.

then I'm sure the OUL would give them a fair shot. In other words - don't assume that the University is sponsoring a particular religion just because they allow that particular religious group on campus. And don't assume that the University is practicing discrimination just because not every religion is represented.

Furthermore, if it bothers you that the OUL sponsored, but did not fund, the Gideons, than you should know that there are several religious clubs on campus that do receive funds from the SGA. In addition, they have the same rights and privileges (meeting rooms, offices, university recognition, etc.) as other clubs on campus, no more, no less. However, the bulk of funding for some religious clubs comes from outside sources.

This is not a church/state issue, the University simply recognizes the importance and the right of students with similar beliefs and values to meet on campus.

I like your idea of religious and perhaps other types of clubs setting up tables. In fact, we at Campus Ambassadors had planned to set up a book table earlier in the semester. Things didn't work out as planned but perhaps later in the semester we will do this. However, don't expect to see every denomination or religion represented and the same time-that just won't happen. It's not as if anyone is censoring other religious groups-they have the same rights as anyone else. And neither I, nor anyone at the OUL has the desire to deny them of their rights, even if we don't happen to agree with their views.

The banking debacle

The United States is now facing the largest banking crisis since the depression. Banks have been failing at an alarming rate since 1985. That year marked a major departure in banking regulation from the previous five decades. The Reagan administration, now in its fifth year, pursued a policy of industry deregulation. The legislative changes that resulted stemmed from a political philosophy that stressed less government intervention in business. Although intuitively appealing this doctrinal belief ignores the hard lessons taught by the depression.

This program of deregulation based its theoretical underpinnings on the idea that regulating business artificially constrains its ability to grow. It should also be kept in mind that most attempts to regulate a given industry have met with tremendous initial opposition. No regulation of industry came into existence from lack of political dissent. In fact the opponents of regulation have historically thwarted most legislative attempts aimed at industry, enabling them to peddle unsafe products, pollute the environment and squander individuals life savings.

Following the stock market crash of 1929 Congress responded to the resulting banking disaster by enacting legislation designed to prevent this from happening again. The regulations adopted prohibited the savings and loan industry from engaging in speculative ventures. One of these regulations, Regulation Q, restricted S&L banks from investing in the stock market. In 1985 Congress repealed this regulation paving the way to the current crisis.

Banks with no experience in speculative investment now entered the stock market only to suffer staggering loses. Most of these losses came from "legitimate" mismanagement, but a substantial amount resulted from larceny of an unprecedented magnitude. This coupled with losses in land speculation and failed business has jeopardized the entire banking system. Many banks bought Junk Bonds and invested in Florida swamp land making people like Michael Millkin and Charles Keating wealthy. The idea of a buying a Junk Bond, a bond back by nothing but the hope that its value will increase, is absurd. When faith is lost in it, so goes its value, leaving the holder with a worthless piece of paper.

Now today the American public will be asked to pay for this mess because the insurance program designed to prevent a collapse of the banking system cannot handle the problem. To prevent the banking system from collapsing, Congress has created a bailout fund, supported by taxpayers. People who ironically did not create nor profit and actually lost money, are now paying for the solution. As if that sense of justice was not bad enough, the people responsible for this nightmare are not being held accountable. The case against Michael Millkin typifies this kind of justice.

The government's case rested on 96 separate charges of which Millkin was convicted of only 6. A nice bit of plea bargaining! Unfortunately it took 3 years and cost the taxpayer's millions of dollars to prosecute to him. Millkin himself reported spent 2 million a month for his defense. Throughout his trial, Millkin continued to operate like business as usual, so that upon conviction and following his fine of 600 million dollars he remained a billionaire. The same will probably be said about Charles Keating who is currently awaiting his trial for defrauding the people who invested in his banking interests. Too bad the American people must pay again.

Should these people even be held accountable? They only exploited a situation favorable to their interests. Is this just a morally repugnant feature of capitalism, based on Darwinist theory, survival of the fittest. Finally a note for the political pundits on the conservative right who point to the Reagan revolution and heralded it as great tribute to political genius, please just look at the current budget crisis. I hope these people had not intended on visiting the Statue of Liberty over this Columbus Day weekend

Hunger and Homeless...

Hunger and homelessness can strike anyone or any family. It can be found in the cities and the suburbs; it can be found here at the University. The problem is pervasive and is not limited to alcoholics, drug users, mentally ill or the "lazy." As individuals we may feel there is little we can do to correct the problem, but each of us can help to lessen the burden of those less fortunate than ourselves. We need only work together.

Therefore, in keeping with the university and city's efforts to assist the hungry and homeless, we are asking all visitors to the Health Service to consider a donation to be handed over to a local shelter or food pantry.

The following items will be accepted:

Canned goods, Winter hats, Mittens and gloves, Winter scarfs, Socks (new). ALL ITEMS SHOULD BE NEW OR CLEAN AND IN GOOD CONDITION.

ATTENTION ALL JUNIORS

Juniors interested in a career in government or related public service are invited to apply for a three-year scholarship sponsored by the Harry S. Truman Memorial Scholarship Trust Fund. Selected candidates are awarded a maximum of $8.00-$10,000 per year in their senior year and for two years of graduate study. Each scholarship will cover eligible graduate or professional school expenses in the following categories: tuition, fees, books, and board. The University of Lowell can nominate three students for this competition. All majors are eligible, but all applicants must be entering their senior year in the 1991-1992 academic year, and they must have at least a "B" average and be a United States citizen. They also should be able to demonstrate an interest in a career in public service, and an active involvement in public service activities such as those associated with government agencies, community groups, or political campaigns. Deadline for applications is October 29, 1990.

Please contact the university's Truman Scholarship Representative, Professor Jeffrey S. Handler, Department of Political Science, South Campus, Coburn 204, or extension 4255.

Rasinet - These past weeks have been long, tiersome, and lonely without you, but the weekends have proven to be rewarding to me. I'm looking forward to many more happy weekends. Love Goober.

TO EQUALITY 7-2521: "We do not know how big the crowd is or what opposition is until we get out of step with it." I know how it feels to see humanity as a pack of rats in a cage; but the cage of our SELF can be the worst of all. We are each our own Best Friends, and our own Worst Enemies, and it takes much to know where that fine line lay. Getting 'out of step' with The Crowd can be bloody sometimes, but that's where we find the truest form of OURSELVES. "I am no one, and everyone; I am nowhere, and everywhere.": I am The Darkman

TO ED LOVER and SH*TSTAIN, er, MUDstain: Oh, boy... every semester we get to meet a new scumsucker... THIS TIME, we get TWO (Ed lover and Mudstain! Wow! What a pair!) Oh, can I stand the suspense until your next thrilling words? From Your NEW FRIEND: CAPTAIN RIKER

TO THE QUEEN OF HEARTS: It's so nice to see you finally come out of your shell! I knew that your friends and I would be able to show you that you don't need to be shy or feel awkward, and that we always welcome your input (like shouting "A DOG!?" at the top of your lungs.) No need to fear, my dear; you're among friends! From your Ace of Hearts

Dawn...Thirty days hath November, April, June, and the speeding offender. ...Mike-Mike

ED LOVER: Hurt me, hurt me. If you knew who we were, we may actually be hurt; but since your judgement is based on nothing, your opinions are treated as just so much hot air. Here's a dime; go call someone who cares. signed, your pal SCI-FI and the U. Lowell Zoo Crew

MUDSTAIN: Why jump down my thoat? Zoo Crew isn't hurting your chances of getting your personals in. The way you wrote you sounded selfish. Now I know that you have NO friends, so you put others down. Campus Mom

MUDBRAIN: So, in effect, what you're really trying to say is that you have no friends and therefore nothing better to do than bother other people. From now on, when you spy on us in the Lounge, make sure WE can't see YOU, too. Go back to your 'exploding heads' Personals (or has your head exploded From all the Crap it's filled with?) -Love, Kisses, and Cheeze Whiz! signed, SCI-FI (a friend of Campus Mom)

TO my UNSIGNED admirer: Sign your Personals, friend; that makes it easier to slam you the following week. And while you're signing your name to next week's, howzabout getting a real WIT; your current version is pretty dim... SIGNED, SCI-FI

Ed Lover- I think that the only person in danger of being a loser is you. If you weren't, you wouldn't have made such an idiotic and ignorant statement as the one about us. When you get a life, come back and TRY to insult us again, and maybe we'll listen to you. -The Raven

Mudstain- You really don't get it! What is your problem? Is there a reason that you enjoy being an as*h*le? Love and kisses, and a boot to the head, another to the solar plexus, and a back round kick roll you over. - The Raven

To everyone- It's really quite interesting how there are so many people on the page who take shots at the Ulowell Zoo Crew, but have absolutely no idea as to what the Crew is all about. If the page really needs fools like Ed Lover and Mudstain to keep things interesting, it's really in sad shape. -The Raven

Raven: the thought of your sweat socks on my dinner plate makes my mouth water! If you would like to have lunch, or just tea and a snack of used Dr. Scholl's insoles, call me anytime... I'm very hospitable!! Love and 3-month-old-arch-supports, Mudstain

Chalcedony: Idiot? Me??!?! I'm very flattered, but you must have me confused with someone else! I am MUCH too dumb to be an Idiot!! Mudstain(I.Q. 8)

Too the rest of the Zoo Crew: You've all heard it: I am a stupid, ignorant sweat-sock-sucking geek!! Now that I've met the qualifications, can I join?? Or do I have to get anally inflamed over the slightest little joke first? How about if I get easily insulted over nothing? How about if I misspell a lot of personals? Then can I join? Come on!! Pleeeeeease!! Eagerly awaiting your reply, Mudstain

Hey, what's on the quiz?

Now that that's over, what's a dead horse? Answer: if you see a horse, and it has no pulse, and it's not breathing, it's a dead horse!!

"I wonder what the Personals Page was like before an UNSIGNED Peckerhead came here?" Probably a lot BETTER. Grow up and go AWAY... From The Stormtrooper (friend to the U Lowell Zoo Crew)

Yeah....yeah....uh-huh...yeah.

To the Ace of Hearts: Thanks for all the help you've given me recently. It was appreciated more than you know. I just wanted to let you know that I think you are a pretty wonderful friend. Love, the Queen of Hearts

Dark Man Thanks for the reply. To think that I'm alone in the world would be only partly right. As for Jesus, He had a faith in something else that made this world make a bit more sense, and I have not so strong a faith. Besides, the God I know doesn't solve my problems, and "giving myself over completely" is exactly NOT what He wants me to do. Equality 7-2521

Dark Knight == How you came to be called the Dark Knight in the personals page, I'll never understand. Someone with your low-life status using a name of such reverence just doesn't make any sense, actually it must make the people who know you sick. But then again you do a excellent job of that anyway. Your ethics are so backwardsFrom the "real" Dark Knight it's hilarious I hate to tell you but humility and arrogance are inversely related, you having an abundance of the latter. Please do the rest of us a favor and either change your ways, or jump in front of a moving train. I'm sure the second choice would be easier for you. ==SHADOW

ED LOVER: It takes one to know one. Campus Mom

Ed Lover - Ah the pathetic musings of a young imbicile not yet indoctrinated to the many views of this dimension. When you have learned to understand that other beings associations with each other need not be a "bunch of pathetic losers", but the concept of friends which i very much think you cannot comprehend, you might just rise above the average ignorant person and become enlightened. - Father

Hockey 1990-91 Outlook

The 1990-91 season will mark the end of an era in University of Lowell sports annals when veteran head coach Bill Riley hangs up his whistle and skates at the conclusion of the season. It is difficult to imagine the Chiefs taking the ice in 1991-92 without their mentor for 22 of the team's 24 seasons.

During 21 seasons to date as the Chiefs head coach, Riley has compiled an impressive 353-247-21 record at UL (365-253-22 overall), guided his teams to three NCAA Division Two and four ECAC Division Two East titles, and overseen the transformation of a program that once practiced on an outdoor rink to playing among the nation's elite in Division One. He will be succeeded by Bruce Crowder who will serve as the associate head coach this year.

Riley has 19 returning lettermen from last year's team that finished 13-20-2 in a rebuilding season. The Chiefs were in the hunt for a possible home ice berth in the HOCKEY EAST playoffs going into the final seven games of the regular season. But, the team ran out of gas ending the campaign with a seven-game losing streak, then was dispatched from the playoffs by the University of Maine in two straight

The bit question facing Riley and the Chiefs this season is "Who is going to put the puck in the net?" Center Craig Charron (17-29-46) and left wing Scott MacPherson (21-18-39) have departed after scoring 31.4% (38/121) of the Chiefs goals last season. Only senior left wing Brendan Flynn 10-1323) and junior center Greg Carter (10-8-18) were in double figures in goals scored among the returning players.

The Chiefs offensive production dropped slightly last season (3.46 goals per game from 3.59 goals in 199-89), but their defense improved overall (5.34 goals allowed per game, down from 5.59 in '88-89) and dramatically in HOCKEY EAST (5.05 from 6.00). The loss of Charron and MacPherson puts plenty of pressure on the returning forwards to pick up the slack and the defense to keep the Chiefs in games early in the season.

Riley is expecting improvement on special teams. The Chiefs have ranked at, or near, the bottom of HOCKEY EAST the past two years in powerplay percentage and penalty killing. The Chiefs cut way down on their penalty minutes and surrendered just 4.2 powerplays per game in HOCKEY EAST games compared to 6.1 the previous season. The powerplay did well the first two-thirds of the season, but tailed off the last third, partly due to a shoulder injury sustained by MacPherson that limited his effectiveness.

Playing in the toughest league in the country according to Riley, the veteran coach is looking for h is team to come into training camp ready to 110% percent. The big question will be how quick the sophomores (twelve on the preseason roster) come of age and how much will the freshman class produce? Next week there will be a position by position look at the 1990-91 Chiefs.

Field Hockey Erupts

by Eric Pastore

At last, the sleeping giant has awoke. Forget all that past chatter about their anemic offense. Forget all the shut-outs and over-time losses. The ladies field hockey team has a new high octane attack. The Chiefs ended a six game losing streak with a 2-1 week, scoring seven goals in those three

Assumption College was Lowell's first victim of the week. Freshman sensation Amy Lavina scored two goals, and sophomore standout Miki Bryan scored the other as the Chiefs buried the Greyhounds 3-0. The three scores proved to be more than adequate for goaltender Ruth Benoit, as she once again stymied an opponent, with her second shutout of the

The Chiefs travelled to Yale on the 6th, and experienced their only let down of the week. A tough Yale team won 3-1, but were fought hard by the Chiefs. Bryan highlighted the game somewhat by scoring her team leading fifth goal, assisted on by freshman standout Melissa Morse's team best fourth assist.

It was back to business for the Chiefs' offense on the 7th against Fairfield, as they claimed another victim. This time, the offensive attack was lead by yet another freshman, Courtney Foley. She scored two of the Chiefs goals on this day, as the team dominated on both ends, winning 3-1. Benoit gave her usual blue-collar performance in goal, getting down and dirty, stopping barrage after bar-

Many good things come out of this week for the Chiefs. Not only was it a positive note to come away with two victories, but it is perhaps foreshadowing of what is to come. With two freshman, Lavina and Morse, and sophomore Bryan, tied for the team lead in points with six a piece, and freshman Foley not far behind, the Chiefs have much offensive potential. Add that to the ever growing superiority of Benoit in goal, and there is the foundation for a team to be reckoned with this week was a big step in that direction, giving the Chiefs a 3-8-1 record.

Volleyball Rolls Through Weekend Tourney

by Eric Pastore

Look out UCLA, USC, Stanford or any one of you other self proclaimed national powers, the University of Lowell Volleyball team has arrived. Who said the best volleyball is played out west??? The Chiefs rolled through the Southern Connecticut State University Invitational, this past weekend, its first tournament championship in two years. It leaves them with on 18-2 mark, best start in team history, and a claim of winning 27 of their last 28 games.

Lowell stormed through all its opponents en- route to the tournaments championship game. The Chiefs strung together 2-0 wins over Merrimack, Franklin Pierce, Southern Connecticut and Eastern Connecticut, to reach the finals. There, they didn't miss a beat as the beat Sacred Heart 2-0. Nothing but great team play can be attributed to the women's domination. "It was a great tournament," says senior cocaptain Christine Leonard, who brought her kill percentage up to an ominous 30.7%. "Our team played tough and we stuck together. Each person had a role to play and we brought it all together for the Championship." Junior Michelle Roy went over the 400-assist mark. Senior co-captain Sue Martin and junior Jan Andrusaitis made strong contributions, as well as the rest of the squad.

The members of the Bentley Tournament this weekend stand to be the next victims for the Chiefs. ULowell will hope for the speedy recovery of junior star Marybeth Fleming who has been out sick.

University of Lowell PLAYER OF THE WEEK Joy Higgins - Women's Tennis

Freshman Joy Higgins, the Chiefs #1 singles player, extended her unbeaten streak to 11 games this week. Joy has lost only 1 set out of 23 sets played in singles. Last week, Higgins defeated Merrimack's Jen Hatem, the top player at the New England (Div 2) tourney last fall. This weekend Joy will via for the N.E.C.C. #1 singles title in Connecticut. "I'm looking forward to the conference tournament and also hope to do well in the New Englands." Joy teams with Tracy Capone to make the team's top doubles tandem. "Joy is a great partner.

We have a lot of fun playing together," says Capone. Joy, a Political Science major, comes to ULowell from Groton-Dunstable High School where she played #1 singles and served as captain. "I really like ULowell. The team is great." Captain Donna Leonard adds, "Joy was a great surprise. She took over the responsibilities of the #1 singles player with such ease. Joy never seems to be nervous and is always very positive. She has contributed so much already both on and off the court."

Chiefs Explode on Homecoming- Whip Curry 63-14

by Eric Pastore

How would they react? That was the question many were asking as the ULowell football team had their 17-game regular season winning streak and perhaps their confidence, broken by division three juggernaut Plymouth State. The Panthers forced the Chiefs into some uncharacteristically sloppy football, which resulted in a 34-7 Plymouth victory. Well, if Saturday's performance against Curry is any indication of how the Chiefs react to defeat, pity the rest of their opponents. The team responded with nothing less than their most explosive game in school history, with a 63-14 shellacking of the Colonels. The 63 points were assisted by the Chiefs record tying 28 third quarter points, and 35 total second half points.

A homecoming crowd of approximately 1,500 got it's money's worth as a number of Chiefs put on shows. Just when it looked as though Curry would make a game of it, trailing only 21-14 late in the first half, the Chiefs went into high gear. Freshman kick returner

Chris "the Rocket" Meelia began the run with a 73 yard return, setting up one of sophomore quarterback David Lyons school record tying three touchdown passes. Lyons replaced Billy Rizos in the second quarter. On the receiving end of the touchdown was junior tight end Tom Lafferty, who would set a school record with four touchdown receptions on this night. Lafferty showed why he had All-American status as he proved to be a man among boys to Curry's defensive backfield.

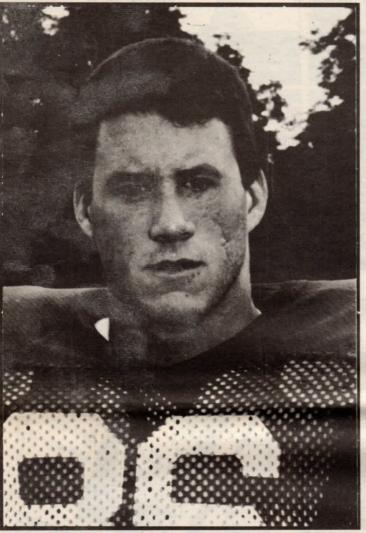

As if the air assault wasn't debilitating enough to helpless Curry, the ground attack continues to roll with the hellacious of a Sherman Tank. Following the blocks of the offensive linemen (known as the "HOGS"), Brian Gauthier rushed for 125 yards and three touchdowns. The "HOGS" played an outstanding game for the Chiefs. "I feel the O-Line played a great game because we really pulled together, got off the ball well, played aggressive and knew our assignment," said freshman tackle Jim Desmarais. "The middle of the line (center and guards) has always been very strong but the tackles are really starting to come together," adds 'Head Hog' Russ Williams.

Lafferty and Gauthier combined for an amazing 7 touchdowns and sophomores Tom Machado and Eric Pike added the final two scores. Place kicker, Dennis Anselmo finished off every one of the Chiefs' nine touchdowns with the extra point. By converting nine of nine PAT's, he tied a New England Division III record.

Not to be lost in the shuffle of this record setting offensive performance by the Chiefs, is the performance by the team's defense. The ever intimidating, hard hitting unit shut out Curry from the end of the second quarter, though the second half. Once again lead by the Lawrence Taylor-like pressure of senior captain Bob Cote, the hard hitting of Derek Larson and every other nut and bolt in the the machine, the defense dominated the opponents. Four interceptions were turned in by the Chiefs' defense. Ron Anderson returned an interception 25 yards and Todd Boyle, Don Bartlett and Tom Casey each had interceptions.

The Chiefs now stand at 2-1 in the NEFC North and 4-1 overall. This weekend the Chiefs travel to Cape Cod to play Massachusetts Maritime. Right now it looks as though Mass. Maritime will have their hands full. But then again what could the Chiefs possibly do for an encore? Time will tell.

Tom Lafferty pulled down 4 touchdowns against Curry.

Women's Tennis Still Unbeaten

by Rayanne Drouin

The University of Lowell Women's Tennis continued their winning ways this week adding three more wins to their 11-0 record. The Lady Chiefs defeated Merrimack College, 7-2, University of Maine, 8-1, Franklin Pierce College, 9-0 and Salem State College, 8-1. Thus far, the team has lost only 7 of the 99 matches it has played this season. Joy Higgins, Donna Leonard and Laura Marshall remain undefeated at first, fourth and sixth singles, respectively. In doubles, the teams of Leonard and Florina Raducanu, Marshall and Valerie LaBelle and Sarah Hirtle and Leslie Pini are also undefeated.

Last Tuesday, the team defeated a tough team from Merrimack College in extremely windy conditions. The Chiefs were looking to avenge their only loss last season against Merrimack. Joy Higgins, won an exciting three set match over the 1989 N.E Div 2 singles champ, Jen Hatem, 5-7, 6-1, 6-2. In the #6 spot, Laura Marshall continued to outwit her opponents with consistent play and a strong net game. She also posted a tough 3-set victory at Merrimack.

Over the holiday weekend, the Women's Tennis hosted UMaine and FPC. The first-ever meeting between ULowell and the Division 1 Maine Black Bears was decided early as the Lady Chief's won 5 of the 6 singles matches and continued to sweep all the doubles matches.

This weekend, the team will travel to Southern Connecticut State University to defend its New England Collegiate Conference Title. In the 1989 tourney, the ULowell Chiefs won 19 of its 20 matches to take the team title and 3 of the 4 individual flights. The last dual match of the year will be on Wednesday, Sept. 17 at U.N.H. This match has the potential to be the toughest of the year based on the reputation of Division 1 New Hampshire.
